(Discuss importance in terms of historical or architectural context as defined by theme, period, and geographic scope. Also address integrity.)

The structure is located in the City of Huntington Park, in an industrial/commercial area. The building is California mission in style, a design which is common in southern California. There is no information in the Los Angeles County Tax Assessors database regarding this structure. It has no known address or parcel number (address is taken from Sanborn Maps). Research of Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps indicates that the structure was originally constructed for use by the Mahl Steel Supply Co.

The integrity of this property is low given that there is no information available concerning its date of construction or possible alterations/additions over time. The structure is in fair to poor condition and appears to be vacant. It is not a particularly good example of the architectural style or of a method of construction. Research of available historical records has not uncovered any significant associations of the occupants.
